The Science Fair

Mr. Patel, the science teacher, announced that the annual school science fair was coming up in two weeks. All the students were excited! Each student had to create a project and explain how it worked.

Lily and her best friend, Sam, decided to work together. They wanted to create a volcano model that could "erupt" using baking soda and vinegar. They gathered all the supplies: clay, a plastic bottle, red paint, baking soda, and vinegar.

On the day of the science fair, Lily and Sam set up their volcano on the display table. When the judges came by, Sam poured the vinegar into the bottle. The mixture bubbled and frothed, making the "lava" spill over the sides of the volcano. The judges clapped and smiled.

After all the projects were reviewed, the winners were announced. Lily and Sam were thrilled when they heard their names called — they had won second place!
